Gabler Group Receives Order from Asian Navy for New Generation of Mission-Critical Buoyancy Control System Components

- Order volume of approximately EUR 4.4 million
- Project duration through 2031 with revenue recognition beginning in 2027
- New product generation opens up additional market potential in international submarine programs

Lübeck (Germany), 9 July 2026 – Gabler Group AG (ISIN: DE000A421RZ9 / Ticker: XK4, the “Company” or “Gabler”), an established developer and manufacturer of mission-critical subsea technologies in the business areas of Submarine Systems, Subsea Communications & Data and Subsea Power, has received an order worth approximately EUR 4.4 million for the supply of the new generation of its mission-critical buoyancy control system components as part of an Asian submarine program. The order covers the delivery of components for two submarines. The project is scheduled to run from 2026 through 2031. Initial revenues are expected to be recognized beginning in the 2027 financial year.

Ole Johannsen, CSO of Gabler Group: “This second order for our new product generation not only confirms its technological competitiveness but also highlights its international market potential. Each successfully completed project expands our reference base and lays the foundation for further growth in our Submarine Systems business.”
